

EDWARD INGRAHAM Retired Director of LBS

LBC Arts Enrichment Fund

By establishing this fund, Dr. Ingraham hopes to provide support that will encourage Lyman Briggs College to continue to furnish its students with arts-related community activities similar to the annual excursion to the Stratford Festival that he organized while he was Director from 1987 to 1998.

Why is giving back to LBC important to you?

As a mathematician with a strong interest in the arts, I feel it is important for students who are heading for a career in science to be encouraged to make the arts part of their lives. While Director, I organized trips to theater performances at the Stratford Shakespeare Festival and to concerts at Wharton Center.

Tell us about your time at Holmes Hall.

I taught for one year in Lyman Briggs School during the late Sixties. Then I returned to Briggs as Director in 1987 and spent eleven enjoyable years administering the unit as well as teaching math.
