This course provides an interdisciplinary survey of key theories and methods in bioethics. Topics may include end-of-life decision-making, cultural diversity, and health care policy. Rather than focusing on the arguments for or against particular practices or policies, this course will take a broader view so that students understand how different disciplines approach topics and issues in bioethics, both academically and professionally.

No Prerequisites. Required for Bioethics Minor
Open to non-LBC students

Find out more on the LBC website: